Dear Parents/Caregivers,

Suddenly it's August! More and more the year races by. The old saying that every day counts is so true. Each day that a child spends at school builds on their previous learning and entrenches the habit of attending.

Where there are numerous absences, this tends to build a pattern of avoiding school engagement. As a result, achievement is slowed down, and in the long term a child's life choices may not be so great.

Our simple message is: If your child can come to school, send them

School absences should only be for sickness/medical appointment and significant family matters. Attending school is the first priority for children, and we thank all of our families who follow this through.
